

PEACE STUDIES JOURNAL

August 2017

Special Issue

Addressing the Impacts of Forced Migration

ABOUT ISSUE: This special issue examines the impact of community and/or policy responses to displaced persons or forced migrants on the displaced populations, host communities, states of origin, and/or the wider regional or international system. We are interested in submissions which consider the impact of formal refugee and asylum policy at the national or international level as well as the impact of informal responses emanating from sources such as public opinion, populist political rhetoric, or media discourse. This is an interdisciplinary journal open to all disciplines such as but not limited anthropology, art, conservation biology, history, political science, sustainability, and sociology.

ABOUT PSJ: The Peace Studies Journal, founded in 2008 out of the initiative of the Central New York Peace Studies Consortium was established as an informal journal to publish the articles presented at the annual Peace Studies Conference, but in 2009 the journal was developed into an international interdisciplinary free online peer-reviewed scholarly journal. The goal of the journal is to promote critical scholarly work on the areas of identities politics, peace, nonviolence, social movements, conflict, crisis, ethnicity, culture, education, alternatives to violence, inclusion, repression and control, punishment and retribution, globalization, economics, ecology, security, activism, and social justice.

ABOUT SUBMISSIONS: The journal welcomes scholars, activists, and community leaders to submit. We hold to a caring, welcoming, and constructive process aiding in the publishing of your articles/review, rather than turning you away with delayed harsh and deconstructive review feedback. We encourage articles that interweave theory and practice and especially welcome articles on topics that have not yet been examined.

Submission deadline: June 15th, 2017

Please submit your essay, interview, review, poem, activist reflection, protest report, and/or polemic via e-mail as an attachment to:
